Nonprofit Mission and Goals

Nonprofit organizations play a crucial role in addressing societal issues and enhancing the well-being of communities. The mission and goals of a nonprofit are fundamental to guiding its operations and shaping its impact. By defining a clear purpose, nonprofits can focus their efforts and rally support from volunteers, donors, and community members.

The Community Foundation for SW Washington has the mission to engage communities and mobilize resources where everyone can chart their own path toward prosperity and participate fully in shaping our region's future. "For forty years, the Community Foundation has been a trusted leader for local philanthropy, which makes us uniquely prepared to meet the challenges and opportunities ahead," Mark Morton, President.

CDM Caregiving Services will fulfill its mission by being purposefully ambitious "We will continue to be the recognized leader and resource provider of comprehensive programs and services, including care for the elderly and people of all ages with disabilities, Alzheimer's, or dementia." Lisa Capeloto, Development Director, also shared that they are opening a Respite Center in May of 2025.

The purpose of a nonprofit organization is to advance a cause rather than to generate profits for owners or shareholders. Whether it is providing healthcare, education, environmental conservation, or social services, nonprofits exist to address needs that may be underserved or overlooked by other sectors. Their operations are typically driven by passion for their cause, and their focus is on achieving long-term positive change.

According to Lori Pugh, President for Clark County Veterans Assistance Center, their mission is to assist veterans and their families in obtaining benefits, services, and resources to meet their basic needs and to support the reintegration of veterans into the community. They also provide a safe place for veterans to be together with other veterans.

Harper's Playground, Marketing & Events Manager, Lindsey Goodwick, shares that their mission is to inspire and empower global communities to build radically inclusive playgrounds. Through storytelling, consulting, and unique design principles, we create playful nature-scapes where people of all ages and abilities find belonging and social connection through play.

Goal setting is an essential aspect of any nonprofit strategy. Goals provide direction and allow organizations to measure their progress. Clear and achievable goals ensure that resources are used effectively, while also providing a benchmark for success. Without goals, nonprofits can become scattered in their efforts, losing sight of their overall mission. It is important for goals to be specific, measurable, attainable, and relevant to ensure that they guide the organization toward sustainable impact.

The Free Clinic of Southwest Washington's main goal this year is to renovate their space so they can continue to offer high-quality, free, compassionate, quality healthcare in a setting that is efficient, comfortable and functional for patients, staff, and volunteers. "Our goal is to raise $650,000," says their Director of Communications, Development and Outreach, Pam Knepper.

Charis Counseling Associates provides licensed clinical therapy, supporting clients on their journeys toward healing. However, financial challenges often threaten to disrupt their progress. "The goal for 2025 is to reduce scholarship fees to an even lower rate, making therapy more affordable than most insurance copays. We are actively expanding our outreach to businesses and individuals, seeking their support to help bridge the financial gap," says Abe Figuero, Director of Advocacy and Education.

Sharing the mission of a nonprofit with the community is critical for building awareness and garnering support. The mission statement serves as a concise expression of the organization's purpose and values, and it should be communicated consistently across all channels, whether through social media, community events, newsletters, or partnerships. Storytelling is a powerful tool in this process, as it helps convey the human side of the nonprofit's work. By sharing compelling stories of those impacted by the organization's efforts, nonprofits can inspire individuals to become part of the solution.

"We strive to build public and private initiatives that provide opportunities to enrich life-long learning throughout our library communities. We will welcome a new Executive Director and are excited for this new chapter and what's ahead as we work to grow our impact of giving back to our libraries and patrons," states Christine Perry, Executive Assistant for Fort Vancouver Regional Library Foundation. As FVRLibraries' celebrates its 75th anniversary, the Foundation is more committed than ever to their mission.

Open House Ministries goal for 2025 is to help residents moving into OHM West, the new 30-unit apartment complex, sustain their households and build on what they have gained through our program. "We want families to succeed and know they have our support. We envision a community where God's love and grace have restored lives and ended homelessness," says Executive Director, Reneé Stevens.

The vision of a nonprofit is an aspirational view of the future. It is a statement that describes what

Enriching Lives. Providing Opportunities.

While people who experience blindness or visual impairment are a low-incidence population both in our community and across the nation, these individuals face significant barriers to accessing employment, recreation, community and confidence. As a result, those who are blind or visually impaired often live in isolation, lack community, are not offered the chance to be part of activities, which results in poor health outcomes, poor mental health and an unhealthy community. Approximately 85% of the athletes served through NWABA programs are low-income and live in poverty every day. Research indicates that the biggest barriers to physical fitness for children, youth, and adults who are blind or visually impaired are the lack of others with which to participate (community), sighted guides, opportunities or programs, adaptive equipment, and negative perceptions of the visually impaired.

Most of the nation's school-age children who are blind or visually impaired have never participated in sports, physical activities, or a proper physical education program. Although the nationally mandated Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) requires school districts to provide an equal physical education experience for all children regardless of their abilities, in many communities this law is ignored.

Since its inception in 2007, NWABA has grown into a regional leader in adaptive sports programming, serving individuals of all ages and abilities. The organization delivers 5,000+ program and service interactions annually through 500+ in-person and virtual events. Our programs and services are offered in-person across Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana and our Virtual Programs bring services to individuals across the globe.

NWABA's tailored programming is designed to improve the lives of blind and visually impaired individuals using sports and physical activities as a catalyst.

- Sports Outreach uses sport and physical activities like tandem biking, kayaking, swimming, and skiing to build self-esteem, independence, and a sense of community among their peers.
- Sports Adaptation provides adaptive equipment, a comprehensive instructional video library and physical education consultation for individuals, parents, and schools, all free-of-charge.
- Camp Spark provides youth who are blind or visually impaired with a unique opportunity to participate in a week-long developmental youth sports camp hosted on a college campus.
- Virtual Programs offer a variety of 60-minute live and pre-recorded, audio described, and high-contrast virtual workouts to keep individuals healthy and active at home. Our virtual athlete community is growing as athletes join from around the world.

JAMES HILL KNOWS FIRSTHAND THAT HOMELESSNESS IS SOLVABLE

Meeting James Hill for lunch at the Mill City Grill in downtown Kelso, one would never suspect that this now confident man once lived in his car with his daughter and granddaughter. As he discusses his community advocacy work and dreams for the future — including homeownership, marriage and a college degree — it seems impossible that for a time, he experienced Homelessness.

But he did. He put that dark past behind him, with help from local agencies coordinated by Council for the Homeless. Now, he gives back to his community so others in crisis might also flourish.

Hill is acutely aware that unexpected circumstances can cause anyone to wind up unhoused and vulnerable to the worst that life can bring. “Homelessness doesn’t really have one single face,” says Hill. “Homelessness does not discriminate. I’m proof of that.”

Hill was always successful at work and in social circles — until an early family trauma manifested itself in depression. He spiraled into a substance use disorder and felt lost and alone. Then, even as his life was deteriorating, his teenage daughter and her baby came to live with him. That’s when he knew he needed to find help.

A contact at the Evergreen Public Schools connected him with Council for the Homeless. Council saw that James and his family could be helped and stabilized relatively quickly and avoid long-term homeless system support. Through coaching and limited financial assistance, people like Hill can be quickly re-housed.

“The Council helped me take the first step toward a better life,” he says. First, he focused on stabilizing living situations for his extended family, and on improving his health. Later they moved to Kelso and Hill launched a consulting firm devoted to showing others how to practice self-advocacy. He also volunteers with local nonprofits and has enrolled in college classes.

“Council has always held this place in my heart for what they do for people in trouble. They were able to help me and my family, and I am deeply indebted to them.”

Homelessness is solvable.

We all win when Everybody IN our community has a place to call home. It will take Everybody IN Clark County to ensure we achieve this goal. Sign up for our monthly newsletter. Find out how you can help people like Hill and his family.

The Greater Vancouver Chamber (GVC) is proud to introduce the Southwest Washington Nonprofit Collective, a rebranded initiative designed to expand support for nonprofits across the region. This evolution builds on the Chamber's successful nonprofit programming, advocacy, and resource development efforts.

Since launching the Nonprofit POD in 2022 and integrating the Nonprofit Network of Southwest Washington, GVC has strengthened connections between nonprofits and business leaders to create a comprehensive support system for nonprofit success.

Key Programs of the Southwest Washington Nonprofit Collective

Strengthening Nonprofit Success Through Advocacy and Collaboration

Beyond technical assistance, GVC leverages relationships with legislators and economic development organizations to advocate for policies supporting nonprofits. This ensures that critical issues facing the sector receive attention and action.

Bridging Nonprofits and Businesses

A key aspect of the Nonprofit Collective is fostering partnerships between nonprofits and businesses. From legal experts in nonprofit law to marketing agencies specializing in cause-driven campaigns, GVC connects nonprofits with valuable resources to strengthen operations and outreach.

Impact and Future Vision

Since 2022, the Chamber's nonprofit programming has supported over 100 nonprofits across 20+ sectors in Clark, Cowlitz, and Skamania counties. These organizations gain access to innovative programs and connections with community leaders dedicated to a thriving nonprofit ecosystem.

"At the Greater Vancouver Chamber, we are committed to building community, capacity, and leadership within the nonprofit sector," said Janet Kenefsky, Chief Operating Officer at GVC. Support Journalism
That Matters in Your Community!

The Columbian has provided high quality journalism in Clark County for over 134 years of local ownership. We created a new program called Community Funded Journalism to add reporter positions focused on homelessness, the environment, community health and nonprofit work. Your gift today supports investigative reporting and storytelling that benefits our whole community by bringing awareness to issues and solutions, and also holding those in power accountable. Our community deserves a strong, independent newsroom.

the organization hopes to achieve in the long term, often painting a picture of a better world as a result of the nonprofit's efforts. A clear vision can unite supporters around a common goal and give purpose to the day-to-day work of the organization.

The Columbian's Community Funded Journalism Program is designed to raise funds specifically for reporters who will raise awareness for important issues in Clark County, including homelessness, transportation, health, nonprofit services, and the environment. Founded in 1890, The Columbian is a fourth-generation, family-owned media company committed to providing truthful, non-biased news to our community, an essential service for a healthy democracy. This effort is led by Will Campbell, fourth generation Co-Owner & Editor and Kate Sacamano, Chief Marketing Officer.

The vision of the Humane Society for SW Washington is a community where everyone loves and cares for animals. The Longview campus opened in January, and this summer a Community Veterinary Clinic will open, providing low-cost, subsidized veterinary care for pets of income qualified families. "These initiatives will continue to shape the future of animal welfare in Southwest Washington for decades to come," said Sam Ellingsen, Associate Vice President of Communications and Marketing.

The community is instrumental in helping nonprofits achieve their goals. Volunteers, donors, and local partners all play a vital role in supporting the mission. Community involvement can take many forms, from offering time and expertise to providing financial resources or helping to spread awareness. When the community believes in the mission, collective energy can help turn the nonprofit's vision into reality. By cultivating strong relationships and fostering an inclusive environment, nonprofits can continue to grow their impact and make a difference.

What started in 2020 as a passion project of Aric and Brittany Clapp has grown into a lifeline for children and families experiencing foster care. Cloth+Foster has been 100% volunteer run since the beginning. With the unwavering support of volunteers and donors, every dollar raised has gone directly to serving the foster community. Co-founder Aric Clapp shares, "As the need grows, so does the challenge. With greater investment, we can extend our reach and bring even more hope to the children and families who need it most."

Heather Cochran, Director of Community Engagement and Impact for Evergreen Habitat for Humanity reports that they will be starting their largest project to date, a thirty-two home Cottage Cluster, a community of two-story homes thoughtfully designed with gathering spaces and shared green space. "We will need more community support than ever. We are looking for folks to support the projects with their hearts, hands, and voices."

Furry Friends specializes in cat hoarding situations, strays, neonates, and medical cases. "We are dedicated to helping the un-owned kitties in our area and educating the public about spaying/ neutering, cat ownership, and ways to help," Jenn Hutchman, Executive Director. Their goal is to construct a new medical building and launch a TNR (Trap Neuter Return) program.

While there are differences in our SW Washington nonprofits mission and goals, the one thing consistent is there is no shortage of organizations stepping forward. These various nonprofits have missions and goals to impact and support our community. From issues of food insecurity and homelessness; to children, elderly, and veterans; to those needing mental health supports or educational resources; pets needing care and our community needing vital information, the needs are diverse. The process and outcomes may vary but they share a need for people to get involved, by volunteering, fundraising, or serving in some way. As you begin this year, consider how you can help contribute to these missions and by reaching out to one of these or other nonprofits in SW Washington.

WHY MEALS ON WHEELS PEOPLE? WHY NOW?

Clark County’s older adult population is growing rapidly, and the challenges they face are mounting. Rising food costs, cuts to support programs, and increasing isolation are leaving too many seniors struggling to meet basic needs. Meals on Wheels People is more than a meal provider — we are a lifeline in this critical moment.

Our core of our mission is simple yet profound: to enrich the lives of seniors and assist them in maintaining independence. Food is just the beginning. Each nutritious meal we deliver opens a door to vital human connections and social support to those who might otherwise feel alone and forgotten.

These are the people who built the foundation of our community — veterans, nurses, teachers, and first responders who gave everything they had to support us. Now, it’s our turn to invest in them. With your support, Meals on Wheels People is ensuring these individuals receive the food, care, and connection they need to live with dignity.

The need is growing. More than half of the seniors we serve live on less than $20,000 a year, over one-third are 80 or older, and 53% live alone. By 2050, the number of people aged 65 and older in the U.S. will increase by 47%, and in our region, the population is aging even faster. Unless we act now, more seniors will face food insecurity, malnutrition, and isolation.

Meals on Wheels People is uniquely positioned to meet this growing need. Last year, we delivered over 172,030 meals to 1,777 older adults in Clark County, thanks to 247 volunteers who contributed nearly 15,000 hours of service. With six centers across the county, including the Luepke Center — our largest and most active dining center — and an innovative restaurant, The Diner Vancouver, we’re reaching seniors in urban neighborhoods and the most rural areas.

But we can’t do it alone. Imagine a future where every senior has access to the nutritious food, care, and connection they deserve. Meals on Wheels People is making that future possible — one meal, one visit, one connection at a time.

Join us. Volunteer, donate, or learn more at mowp.org. Because no senior should go hungry or feel forgotten. Not now. Not ever.
